Foreword

Although my name appears on the title-page of this volume I can hardly claim to be either its originator or its compiler. Some years ago, when the fury of American Bookplate collecting was at its height, there were in existence several lists of Canadian Bookplates. These lists were fragmentary, of varying lengths, and of uneven value. But they had one feature in common—a certain number of the same names with accompanying biographical notes appeared on all of them. These notes have come down in the present list as a monument to the energy and patience of some unknown collector at whose identity I should hardly wish to hazard a guess. Years passed on until finally one of these early manuscript lists appeared in a Bookplate auction in Boston. It was bought by the American Antiquarian Society whose librarian, Mr. Brigham, very kindly allowed me to go over it. From this list, from a rather scrappy list of my own, from Mr. Jack's "Acadiensis," and from Gagnon's two volumes I compiled what at that time I thought to be a fairly accurate record of early Canadian Ex Libris. Again time passed, publication was delayed, and it was not until some months ago that, under the stimulus of a Toronto Bookplate artist and collector of the present era, I unearthed my list and started once more towards the goal of the printed book. The above mentioned enthusiast who awoke me from my lethargy is Mr. Stanley Harrod who, with

Mr. Morley Ayearst, has revised, corrected and added to my list. They have revised my notes, they have added the many modern plates and some early ones, they have delved in Canadian records, they have unearthed original coppers, they have, even as they roused me, brought back from oblivion some of the forgotten old guard of Canadian collectors. To their generous assistance is due this list in its final polished form, and to them are due most of the excellent illustrative plates from the original coppers and blocks which adorn these pages.

The reader, then, can understand why I should be named as editor rather than as author. This list, like Topsy, has "just growed," and to all who have assisted in its growth I tender my sincere thanks.

I also wish to acknowledge the great kindness of those individuals who have allowed us the use of the coppers or blocks of their Bookplates.

At the end of the list I have made an alphabetical arrangement of all the mottoes appearing on anonymous armorials, together with the names of the families making use of them. This may help to identify plates that otherwise might prove puzzling.

Needless to say I shall welcome additions and corrections which collectors may be able to send, addressed either to me at Box 3066 Boston, or to Stanley Harrod 83 Macpherson Avenue, Toronto, Canada.

A Review of Canadian Book-Plates

A DISGRUNTLED collector once said that the only differences between Canadian and English Book-plates were that the former were harder to get and less interesting when you got them. Which statement has some truth in it. Canadian Ex Libris, especially the early ones, are extremely hard to get, first because there are not many of them, and second because some years ago, or at least so 'tis said, a couple of Book-plate entrepreneurs went through Canada and swept it clean of plates. And Canadian Ex Libris were uninteresting for two reasons, because no one knew much about them, and because most of them were die-sinker armorials. This volume is designed to remove these objections—first by telling something about Canadian Bookplates and their owners, and second by trying to show that there is biographical interest attaching to the early plates and artistic interest as to the modern ones.

Up to the present time the number of writers on the Ex Libris of Canada is small. In 1895 Phileas Gagnon published in Quebec his "Essai de Bibliographie Canadienne." He gave a few pages of text on Ex Libris and listed some two hundred and seventy odd plates. In 1913, some time after M. Gagnon's death, the City of Montreal, to which he had bequeathed his collection of Canadiana, published a second volume of the "Essai" listing the items added to the Gagnon collection. In this work about twelve pages are given to a list of Bookplates not found in Gagnon's original list. These two volumes have stood in the same relation to Canadian as Charles Dexter Allen's list has to American Bookplates. In addition there have been some articles in various magazines, notably an interesting series in David R. Jack's "Acadiensis," but nothing like the flow of Bookplate literature which has made collecting so attractive in the United States.

A comparison of the Ex Libris of Canada and of the United States may be interesting in getting at the characteristics of Canadian plates. Both lands being originally colonies of England they naturally followed English styles and English customs in Ex Libris as in other things. But while the colonists of the New England and Southern states used Bookplates from 1750 and had various styles such as Jacobean, Chippendale, and the like, the Ex Libris history of Canada hardly begins before the American Revolution with the loyalists who went to Canada after 1775, so that Canadians took to Bookplates about 1800 when the most tiresome and inartistic style, the die-sinker armorial, was popular in England. Thus it is that until comparatively recent times we find in Canada an uninteresting series of die-sinkers with very few Jacobeans or Chippendales and practically no pictorial plates.

Perhaps these die-sinkers are characteristic of the Canadians themselves. The plates were usually without mantling or supporters, and their owners were perhaps, like the modern democratic Canadians who refuse peerages, plain and simple people who came without any frills to the new country to make their fortunes. It may be that the families who came to Canada were not of that class which "sport" supporters. At any rate the simplicity and strength of the die-sinkers may be a reflection of the same qualities in their owners.

A return to our comparison shows still another feature of Canadian Ex Libris. The colonies which gained their independence became a separate nation with its own ideas and ideals, developed in its own way, in art as in politics and trade. In fact in the United States there was a feeling which made everything English so disliked that English styles and customs were thrown overboard. One of the first things to go was coat armour, and as a result our present-day Bookplates are mostly pictorial rather than armorial. This naturally makes for artistic rather than conventional ideals in Ex Libris, and in part has helped to develop such artists as E. D. French, J. W. Spenceley, S. L. Smith, A. N. Macdonald, and many others who have done so much to advance the art of Bookplates and make collecting popular. On the other hand, the Canadians followed a different course. Bound to the mother country by ties of blood and affection, the loyalists came to Canada because they liked English rather than American ideas, they followed her lead in most things, one of which was in being proud of their ancestry and using the coats-of-arms which had descended to them. This has, I think, tended to keep out the pictorial plates and has thereby made modern Canadian plates rather less interesting than those of the United States. I happened to glance through a lot of some one hundred and forty Canadian plates, most of them done in the last twenty years. Fifty-two of them, or nearly half, were armorial. To take at random the same number of plates made since 1900 in the United States will show hardly more than ten per cent armorials.

Moreover the armorial style in Bookplates was hardly conducive to art and the development of Ex Libris designers. The commercial engraver could make a die-sinker as well as an artist. It is only in recent years that men like A. H. Howard, W. W. Alexander and Stanley Harrod have turned to the newer ideas of the Bookplate and have produced not only interesting and artistic armorials but also some clever and individualistic pictorials.

But this movement is of recent origin, the engravers who worked before 1890 were of the older and more conventional school, and their number was small. Excluding the strictly modern artists there were but four men who engraved and signed any number of early Canadian Bookplates. It is very probable that there are a number of plates by these designers and by others, but as the great majority of Canadian plates are not signed it is impossible to know them, especially as the more conventional type of the armorial plates allowed little or no latitude for the engraver to develop any personal style or manner. Of the four artists mentioned the earliest was probably C. W. Torbett who engraved the Ex Libris of T. F. Jeffrey, J. W. Johnson and Fitzgerald Uniacke. Torbett, who worked in Halifax, may be dated as flourishing from 1780 to 1825. In Quebec there were two engravers who worked during the first quarter of the Nineteenth Century. They were J. Jones (plates of J. L. Hall, J. Stewart and S. Wright), and J. Smillie, Jr. (plates of Hoffman, McCallum and David William Smith), and both of them are mentioned by Gagnon as being artists of repute. F. Adams of Montreal perhaps took up the work just after Jones and Smillie had passed. He probably flourished during the middle years of the century. Plates by Adams are those for Hagar, La Rocque, Longley, Reid, and Wise.

A few other artists are all that I can find to mention. Suffield (plates of Buchanan and R. J. Uniacke) and E. Benoit (plate of William Smith) were contemporaries of Torbett. A. Bourne (plate of J. P. Turner) and Biddle (plates for the Patton brothers) were nearer the time of Adams. Such engraving firms as the Rolphs of Toronto and the Edwin Cox Co. of Montreal are of later date; they are moreover of the commercial type and the work put out by them cannot be looked upon as the product of one engraver.

The earliest dated plates of which I have record are those of Anne Watt, a plain label of 1795, and the die-sinker armorial of Richard John Uniacke, dated 1801. Of Anne Watt I know nothing but that she lived in Quebec. Uniacke was Attorney General and Member of His Majesty's Council and was still more interesting as being the father of three sons who in their turn possessed Bookplates. There are, however, a number of undated plates which most certainly are earlier than those of Watts and Uniacke. One of the most interesting of these is that of Louis Archambaud Douglas, Comte de Montreal, a beautiful example of the heavy type of 18th Century French Ex Libris. Douglas succeeded to the title in 1770 and went to live in France so that it is probable that his plate was made there rather than in Canada.

It is interesting to notice the difference between the French Canadian and the English Canadian Ex Libris. The former are much in the minority as regards numbers, and are usually labels. Such is that of M. Bedard who was, about 1820, first mayor of Quebec. That the plates of Frenchmen in Canada are mostly labels, such as those of Father Noiseux the Vicaire-Général and Curé of Trois Rivières, may be due to the fact that most of them belonged to Catholic priests who, with true clerical humbleness, were content with the simplicity of a label rather than with a more proud and elaborate plate. A more ornate plate, however, is that of the Collège de Ste. Marie à Montreal, which gives an interesting view of the college guarded by what appeared in those days necessary for a college Bookplate, several cherubs and genii or goddesses of knowledge. I may mention in passing that there seem to be very few modern Bookplates belonging to French Canadians.

One of the most interesting of the 18th Century plates belonging to English Canadians is that of Peter Livius (Allen No. 504, Gagnon No. 4880), who was a loyalist of New Hampshire. After the Revolution he went to Canada and was made Chief Justice of Quebec. Livius was born in England in 1727 and died there in 1795, so that the plate must be earlier than that of Miss Watts. Moreover the print here shown is the first state of the plate, having merely the name "Livius." An escutcheon and the name "Peter" are found on a later state which is presumed to be circa 1780. Another early plate is that of Thomas Walker, perhaps made before 1775, a person who had the dubious honor of having the second book ever published in Canada (Quebec, 1767), put out in regard to him. Other early Ex Libris are those of John Elmsley, a die-sinker of circa 1790, and of William Dunbar, a queer old crest of circa 1800.

In looking through the list of Canadian plates one can hardly help noticing the preponderance of professional men, of lawyers, judges of all kinds and degrees, doctors and clergymen. The law leads easily in numbers with the medics and ecclesiastics far in the rear. Such men as Henry Boulton, Edward Bowen, W. H. Draper, John Hagerty, John Macdonald, Hugh MacMahon, J. L. Morrison, and the Uniackes started in at the bar and made names for themselves either in the law or in politics. Among the doctors is the armorial of William Warren Baldwin of Spadina and the decorative Label of Dr. Trestler. One or two plates belonging to Church of England dignitaries are reproduced, and pedagogy may perhaps be content with a rather odd little design belonging to and said to be designed by Sir Daniel Wilson, F. R. S., once President of Toronto University. Plain everyday citizens have perhaps been rather left out in the cold, so I cannot help mentioning the plate of D. W. Smith who thought so much of Canada that he gave his arms a chief of the beaver and wrote Canada above his crest.

It may perhaps be pertinent to wonder how many Canadian plates were engraved in England. It is very probable that many Englishmen had Ex Libris before they emigrated to Canada. It is also likely that some Canadians, at least in the early days, sent to England for their Bookplates as well as for their books. Some few may have had their plates made while they were visiting in England. Perhaps such a one was B. Homer Dixon of Toronto, at one time Consul to Holland and while there was honored by being made Knight of the Netherlands Lion, an honor which he appreciated by having a new Bookplate, possibly having it made in Holland, with his "Esq.," changed to "K. N. L.," and a representation of his decoration. I have found the following names of English designers signed to Canadian Ex Libris—Culleton, Griffiths & Weigalls, Huntly, W.

Jackson, Jarrett, Mitchell, Pugh Bros., Silvester and A. Wyon. These are all of London, but there are some few from other parts of England such as Murdoch & Sons of Edinburgh.

I may mention the fact that the list includes the Governors General and certain others who, although not actually Canadians, have had a great deal to do with Canadian History. Still another class, who perhaps have rather less right to be included, are those people of other lands for whom Canadian artists have designed Bookplates. It may be questionable as to whether or not such names should be included. But I have thought it best to put them in, especially as the plates were designed by Canadian artists and since, moreover, their biographical notices will show the reader where the plates are at present actually used.

Modern Canadian Bookplates may be said to only partially carry on the traditions of earlier times. The English idea that a coat-of-arms is the only thing for an Ex Libris is only partly the vogue at present. Moreover the older forms of uninteresting die-sinkers have given place to more artistic productions. The plate by W. W. Alexander for Lady Eaton is in my opinion one of the most perfect examples of artistic excellence in Bookplate work. The English plate of Edith Peruzzi de Medici by Miss Helard is the only plate I have seen of the same type which may be said to equal it in beauty of design, excellence of form, and delicacy of finish. The present day feeling that a Bookplate may be a really artistic production has happily taken firm root in Canada and has brought forth such excellent armorials as the above mentioned plate by Alexander and the recent Ex Libris of Sir Edmund Walker by Stanley Harrod.

Some of the modern designers have followed the armorial form and ideas of Thomas Moring and Graham Johnston and have given some of their plates the appearance of woodcuts. Mr. Morley Ayearst has done several rather good plates of this description. In general it may be said that the armorials are now interesting and often artistic and that there is an increasing vogue of the combination of armorial-pictorial plates which uses the coat-of-arms either in a decorative way or as a part of the decoration.

The purely pictorial Ex Libris have also in recent years had an increased popularity in Canada. The growth of a population not brought up in the coat-of-arms tradition combined with the modern artistic impulse, which possibly had its origin in the Edinburgh group of Bookplate moderns or with Guthrie and others, has produced a number of Canadian pictorial or decorative plates. In general, however, these Ex Libris have the same fault as most modern English and American designs—that is, lack of strength. There are, of course, some exceptions, such is the plate of Basil Morgan by J. E. H. MacDonald, but the milk and water school is still at work on Bookplates in modern Canada as in England and the United States. In fact modern Canadian plates seem but a shadow of a shadow, for they too often look like imitations of English designs, and if placed beside a collection of modern German or Spanish plates they are extremely weak and colorless.

There is, however, an element of hope connected with modern plates, since a number of the better Canadian artists have made some Bookplates, and are constantly making more. Members and associates of the Royal Canadian Academy have designed Ex Libris, and it is to be hoped that their examples will raise the artistic tone of modern plates and possibly bring out some artistic impulse in Bookplates which shall be characteristic of modern Canada.

Some twenty artists seem to represent the present Bookplate staff of the Dominion. Of these five may be mentioned as being above the average.

W. W. Alexander, an engraver and etcher of Toronto, has some twenty-five plates to his credit. His later work is of high standard, although he is emphatically an heraldic rather than a pictorial designer. In his armorial Ex Libris he has broken away from the traditional die-sinker style and has followed the older and more correct models.

Morley J. Ayearst, an undergraduate of Toronto University, has for a young designer shown great promise. He has made about a dozen plates and his pen and ink armorials, which follow the spirit of Graham Johnston, are for the most part well composed and bear evidence of a sound knowledge of heraldic design.

Stanley Harrod of Toronto has in number of Ex Libris outstripped all other Canadian artists, having some fifty odd plates to his credit. His pictorial plates are not as successful as his armorials, for he is rather weak on figures. His recent heraldic Ex Libris are modelled on good ideals although in some cases the draughtsmanship leaves something to be desired. His best efforts are those in which he uses pure design of some definite school. The plate for Sir Edmund Walker is remarkably well designed and executed. During the last year Mr. Harrod has been experimenting with etching and has done so well at it that I hope later to see him combine such an idea as the Walker plate with some fine etching and produce some remarkably beautiful Bookplates.

The late A. H. Howard of Toronto was, until his death in 1916 the premier illuminator of Canada. He has done about thirty plates, all in black and white. He was fond of quick, sketchy styles, sometimes too sketchy, and like most modern Canadian, English and American artists could have learned a great deal by study of the work of Sherborn, Cossmann, von Bayros, De Riquer and most of the Germans. Mr. Howard was a master of design and ornament, but often did not consider finish. An excellent example of this is his plate for the National Gallery.

J. E. H. Macdonald, a painter of Toronto, is one of the best all-round designers in Canada. He has made about eight or more Bookplates, all of them good, but in one case at least has had a design reproduced by intaglio when it was not at all fitted for that process.

There are some other Canadian artists who may be mentioned in brief. Carl Ahrens is a landscape artist who has carried his specialty into Bookplates with some success. Alex Scott Carter, an excellent illuminator who was trained as an architect, has made some half dozen plates which show simplicity in treatment, good design, and his training as a student of illumination of the best mediæval periods. E. M. Chadwick is a lawyer of note and the chief heraldic authority of Canada. His few Ex Libris all follow the Tudor style of Garter plates and are excellent examples of that school. Selwyn Image of Oxford, a noted designer of stained glass, has made a plate which shows strong, sure work and a full knowledge of design and craft. Edwin J. Cox of Montreal follows the mid-Victorian tradition of heraldic plates, and naturally although his craftsmanship is good his designs lack imagination. H. Ecclestone of Toronto has made a few plates, one or two of which are rather like Harold Nelson's equestrian armorials. Ida Hamilton of Hamilton has done four plates which show excellent feeling for pure design and spots of color. Ida Sutherland, a pupil of A. H. Howard, has designed a few plates, mostly pictorial, which while good are rather overcrowded with material.

Other artists who have produced a plate or two each are Louise Brown, Gustav Hahn, George Lightwood, C. M. Manley, E. V. Pannell, Owen Staples, R. Thomson and E. H. Varley.
